HISTORICAL LANDMARK IN HIALEAH RE-OPENS ITS DOORS

Hialeah, Florida –

America's classic era of the 50's is long gone and many of us still long for an opportunity to relive the days of malt shops, convertible Cadillac's, leather jackets, doo-wop music, and poufy poodle skirts.

Luckily, a little piece of that wholesome era still remains! The City of Hialeah is proudly announcing the re-opening of a Dairy Queen restaurant that has been around since 1951! With the help of the City of Hialeah's Grants Department, the project which took four years to complete has now been restored to its original beauty. Its owners, Steve and Penny Nelson, are proud to reopen the restaurant and offer a new generation of Hialeans the opportunity to enjoy what many enjoyed nearly half a century ago. Join us for this blast into the past and enjoy fresh ice cream made from the same recipe used since 1950!

When – Monday, June 15, 2009 at 1:00 p.m.

Where – 510 Hialeah Drive, Hialeah, FL 33010
